The Beale D. Mullikin House is a large late 19th century two-story frame dwelling which incorporates architectural elements of both the Queen Anne and Stick styles. It has many distinguishing features, one of which is the slate covered Jerkin-head roof covering the main block. The house faces east toward the northbound lanes of Route 301. The main block measures 3 bays by 1 bay and has a central entrance. A 2-story ell extends from the north end of the rear, west elevation. It has a slate-covered gable roof. The principal facade is covered with a 1-story porch which has been enclosed during the last decade. The north and south elevation of the main block are marked with 2-story bay windows. Double windows are located at the attic story above the bay windows. The north elevation of the ell is adorned by a lattice constructed wing with a steeply pitched, slate-covered gable roof with a deep overhang. The gable end of this small wing is filled with ornamental Stick style work.

The Beale D. Mullikin House is significant for its architectural style. It incorporates features of both the Queen Anne and Stick styles. Its size and location on the highest ground in the immediate vicinity have made it a well known local landmark. It is also significant for being associated with a prominent Prince George's County family, the Mullikins. And of special note -- the B. D. Mullikin farm is the one from which a late 19th century tenant house was moved to the Smithsonian. The tenant house was the oldest of three located on the Mullikin farm. (The other two are no longer extant).

The Beale D. Mullikin House, constructed c. 1870, is part of what was a large, 400 acre farm conveyed to Beale D. by Mortimer H. Mullikin in 1866. Tobacco and corn were the primary crops. Numerous outbuildings were associated with this site of which three survive - A stable, chicken house, and meathouse. They stand behind the house to the southwest and west. The tenant houses, one of which was moved to the Smithsonian, stood north and northwest of the house at the present location of a small shopping mall.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Beale D. Mullikin House is located on a 1.64 acre tract situated on a slight hill between the northbound and southbound lanes of Route 301, just inside the Bowie City limits. Locally, this area is known as Mitchellville.

The house is a large late 19th century two-story frame dwelling which incorporates architectural elements of both the Queen Anne and Stick styles. It has many distinguishing features, one of which is the slate covered Jerkin-head roof covering the main block. The house faces east toward the northbound lanes of Route 301. The main block measures 3 bays by 1 bay and has a central entrance. A 2-story ell extends from the north end of the rear, west elevation. It has a slate-covered gable roof. The principal facade is covered with a 1-story porch which has been enclosed during the last decade. The north and south elevation of the main block are marked with 2-story bay windows. Double windows are located at the attic story above the bay windows. The north elevation of the ell is adorned by a lattice constructed wing with a steeply pitched, slate-covered gable roof with a deep overhang. The gable end of this small wing is filled with ornamental Stick style work.

The southwest corner of the main block and the ell are filled with a small 2-story addition, the second story of which is a porch. Another addition, made in the last decade, extends from the small addition and completely fills the southwest corner of the house, running the length of the ell and beyond.

The house rests on a brick foundation and has no basement except for a small furnace room entered from the north side of the house. The walls of the main block and ell are covered with novel siding and the small addition with German siding. There are four brick interior chimneys, two in the main block and two in the ell. The windows are 2/2 sash.

The interior of the house, like the exterior has retained virtually all of its original features and trim. The main block is based on a central hall (passage) plan with one room to either side. Double doors surmounted by a two-pane transom form the main entrance into the central hall of the house. Each door consists of a single panel surmounted by a single pane window. A decorative metal doorbell pull is located on the right door.

The two front rooms flanking the central passage are lit by the bay windows and are heated by corner fireplaces with marbelized slate mantels. The stair is located in the rear, northwest corner of the main block. The decorative stair case is noteworthy for a massive, carved newel post. It is simple in design with chamfered corners and a large pyramidal cap. Smaller versions of this form the stair posts at the second story landing.

7. Continued

The second floor of the main block contains two rooms, also heated by corner fireplaces with simple wooden mantels. A staircase, located in the southwest corner of the second floor, leads to a finished attic.

On the first floor, the ell is reached from the northwest corner of the main block behind the stiar.

The house is finished with lath and plaster. Floors are predominately random width boards. Much of the original hardware has survived.

There are three frame outbuildings associated with this site: a garage, a board and batten chicken coop and a board and batten meathouse which features a massive door with heavy metal hinges.

The house is presently used as a florist shop/nursery, but there are plans by a perspective buyer to convert it to a country inn.
